as workers grow older: achieving safety & productivity

September 27, 2005, 8:00 am - 4:30 pm

There are growing numbers and percentages of workers over the age of 50 in Washington workplaces. In some ways these older workers are the most vulnerable but they are also the most skilled, productive and reliable. What steps can employers and unions take to ensure that an aging workforce will remain both safe and productive?

Participants in this course will:

- Learn how our workplaces are changing as the baby boom population nears retirement age.
- Understand the effects of aging on mental and physical performance at work.
- Learn what kinds of programs and policies best meet the needs of older workers.
- Hear what other Washington companies are doing to address these growing needs.
